Baby gets a vote too

So as the political season starts to ramp up, so too are the supplies of baby-sized political wear, apparently. Some parents want their little ones to express the same views they do. There's everything from "Mommy and Me for Hillary" onesies to "Mitt Happens" bibs (I'm not really sure how that's supposed to be taken, I think either side could go for that one.) You can even go to babiesforobama.com and buy apparel and make a campaign donation at the same time.

It's a mixed bag out there as to whether this is a good thing or not. Some say no way, while others say it's no different than dressing up the tyke in your favorite sports team garb.

What do you think? Will your little one wear words for your preferred candidate or will you wait until they are old enough to cast a ballot?
